

Research Fellowships Fellow Spotlight

Introducing t2pRI's new Research Fellow

Dr. Priyanka Joshi

Research Project:

Transcending the here and now: Examining the Impact of Leader's Future Oriented Communication on Employee Voice

We're excited to welcome Professor Joshi to our research community.

Priyanka Joshi joins think2perform Research Institute from San Francisco State University, where she is assistant professor in the Department of Management. Professor Joshi received her PhD from the Marshall School of Business at the University of Southern California.

Professor Joshi's research interests include leadership, business ethics, and entrepreneurship. In one line of research, she examines the role of cultural interdependence on tolerance of corruption in organizations. Her more recent work examines the role of gender in communication and its effects on numerous interpersonal outcomes, including effectiveness of physician-patient interactions, leadership attributions, and ability to obtain funds from venture capitalists.

Learn more about Research Fellow Priyanka Joshi and her research project here.

Learn more about the Research Fellowships here

Fellowship proposals accepted through January 15 & June 1 each year.

Would you like to support our research and our Future Leaders Academy?

To make a tax-deductible donation, click here.